

MOVE FOR SEPARATE UNIONS TO FORCE UP PAY AS IN LYNN

Unbanned observers do not look for an early settlement of the strike. More than half the observers in Brockton, Arlington, Hingham, Bridgewater and other Old Colony towns are now out and others are hourly expected to come out. The manufacturers, who have sent their lot with the Foot and Shoe Workers' Union, refuse to treat with the locals that are breaking away from that body, calling them "outlaws." The strikers declare the B. & S. W. U. has been discredited in every New England shoe centre ex-

Trouble has been brewing for a long time. It bubbled into serious activity last Monday when the dressers and packers voted to strike because the State Board, giving a 10-cent raise, refused to make a trade-back on February 3, turned down the bond's demand for a pay increase from an average of $18 per week to an average of $25 weekly.

HOLD CONTRACTS.

The shoe manufacturers, with whom the men declare they have no immediate quarrel, hold contracts with the E. S. W. U., by which each party agrees, in case of labor trouble, that the settlement shall be left, pending to the board of arbitration.

STRIKE AGAINST BOARD

"This is a strike against the State Board, which sees things only through the eyes of the manufacturers. We want arbitration that arbitrates. We are liked before we start with the State Board.

"We are through with the Good and Cheap Workers' Union also. Our strike is a protest against this organization.

"Our charter has been revoked. We will organize a separate union. The treasurers and edmenkners have walked out and they, too, I understand, will form a separate, independent union. It looks to me that Another astonishing chapter in the operations of Mrs. Hayes came to light today. This is contained in allegations in a suit filed in 1911 in which Orrill H. Fuller Condemned as 'Worse Than Thaw'

BROKE UP AS CLOSE BY BY A MAN

Office of Man Named as Wife-Beater Was Wrecked by "Pajama Girl"

Nowadays when a financial crash shakes victims into a realization that they have been swindled, the first thing the authorities say is "Cherchez la femme." The revelations in the Schwab forged notes case, in the Manville case and now in the Fuller failure in New York indicate that it isn't possible to play with women and finance and get by with a whole skin.

Edward M. Fuller, head of the firm of E. M. Fuller & Co., which recently crashed in a $5,000,000 failure, was today characterized by George S. Simpson, an attorney, as being a worse "woman-beater" than Harry K. Thaw.

Nellie Black, already known to the world as "The Pink Pajama Girl," is the woman in the case.

On June 12, last year, a woman—young, beautiful and abash with diamonds—entered Fuller's sumptuous office and proceeded very promptly to wreck it. She wrote into Fuller's private office, poured torrents of abusive language upon the broker and threatened him with bodily harm.

Police were summoned and arrested Nellie. At Tomba Court the following day she told her story—how she met Fuller when she was nineteen and a good girl, and how for seven years thereafter she had lived with the broker as his wife.

She started divorce action as a common law wife and dropped it when he paid her $5,000, she said. Then came information that she was a "Mrs. Edith Day," Fuller, who was a divorcee from the broken eighteen months before. Nellie promptly filed a $50,000 breach of promise suit.

William F. McFee, Fuller's partner in the brokerage, also mixed money with stock market. In his past was a "Mrs. McFee," who started suit in January, 1922, against Louise Groody, musical comedy star, for alleged seduction of her husband's affections.

Proceedings were stopped by an announcement from McFee that Mrs. McFee was not his legal wife. Louise at the time was the wife of William Harrigan, the actor. She got a divorce and promptly married McFee. They were to have started on a honeymoon in the summer, but the honeymoon never came. Instead her husband was in the hospital, suffering from a broken shoulder, which was maintained when he fell between two private cars on the New York Central.

KILL 'PROPHET' AND 23 OF HIS FOLLOWERS

Manila, May 21 (A. P.).—Twenty-four religious fanatics on the island of Pata, near Jolo (Sulu) were killed by a detachment of insular constabulary, according to a dispatch received at the office of Governor-General Leonard Wood.

The dispatch said that Akhara, who styles himself a prophet, and his followers, attacked a constabulary detachment under Lieutenant Angeles at the village of Kiput.

The dispatch said that twenty-four Akhara were killed, but that there were no constabulary casualties. Akhara is a religious leader who has gathered about 200 followers. They recently became unusually active. Akhara said he was a prophet from heaven and was bullet proof. Today's dispatch did not say whether the latter statement was borne out. The fanatic also said he had power to cause airplanes to fall.

Governor-General Wood announced he had ordered all forms of livestock stopped and that he had sent a force to Pata to enforce the order.

SOMERSET AND EDITH DAY MARRIED

2 NEWTON BOYFRIENDS IN COURT

Judge Hears Elopers' Case in Secret and Continues It Until Friday

Mary Bostwick, sixteen-year-old Newton girl, whose elopement with Harry W. Denison, son of a Newton paper manufacturer, was wrecked when Denison's automobile failed to function after the first five miles of their trip toward Canada, was arraigned in the Newton court today as a runaway.

Her intended maid of honor, fourteen-year-old Alice MacRae, was also arraigned on the same charge. Judge Denison heard their pleas behind closed doors and then continued the case to the juvenile session next Friday.

The girls went home with their parents. They are disappointed over the fiasco.

Harry W. Denison, twenty years old, No. 133 Grove street, Newton Lower Falls, wanted to be married to Miss Mary Bostwick. Accompanied by his chum, Edward Harrington, twenty years old, son of Michael J. Harrington, No. 223 Washington street, Newton Lower Falls, Denison drove to the Western Bridge Friday afternoon where he met Miss Bostwick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David MacRae, fourteen years old, No. 19 Jiggins street, Auburndale.

At Lexington the automobile refused to function. While garage mechanics worked over its interior, the four young folk taxied to Boston, where they registered as brothers and sisters at the Haymarket Hotel.

Part of the original $54, which was to finance the trip to Canada, had been expended for "gas." Mary went for a taxi, another sum went to pay the hotel bill, still more went for groceries and shopping, with the result that Sunday found the young folk almost without funds.

Miss Bostwick, it is said, telephoned her friends the circumstances and requested the friend come to Boston to the North Station and carry Mary home.

Instead, they were met by two inspectors of the Newton police department, and by Chester and How and MacRae, brothers of the prospective bridegroom.

2,000 QUIT IN WAGE WAR

New York, May 21 (U. S. S.).—Two thousand bricklayers were ordered to strike today bringing to a halt the last wage negotiations that have been in progress with the builders. If the strike continues several days it was estimated $200,000 worth of construction work will be halted. Big office buildings and apartment houses will be most affected.

The bricklayers are demanding a wage of $12 a day and a two-year agreement. They have been offered a $10 daily wage and an agreement of three and one-half years.

Strike of 10,000 painters, threatened for today was averted by an agreement which virtually complied with all the demands of the men.

San Diego, May 21.—Secretary Weeks declared that a short time ago the War Department received an offer from a foreign country to purchase 500,000 rifles and 1,000 rounds of ammunition for each.

"We grew," said the secretary, "that the foreign country did not intend to buy the rifles and ammunition to shoot birds. The United States is not assisting any country to prepare for war and rather than sell the rifles and ammunition for the purpose they evidently were intended for, I would rather dump them into the sea."

Physicians Announce "Slight Operation" on Ex-Premier's Throat

London, May 21 (A. P.).—A serious difference exists in the Conservative party with regard to a successor to Mr. Bonar Law," says the Central News. There is a growing opinion in favor of asking Lord Balfour again to lead the party.

London, May 21. (A. P.).—The physicians of Andrew Bonar Law, retired British Prime Minister, today issued the following statement:

"Mr. Bonar Law had a slight operation on the throat today. Otherwise his condition is unchanged."

Great Britain bids fair to remain without a premier though Whitcomb at last.

King George had asked no one to accept the premiership in succession to Bonar Law, so far as known to the public. The King, it is said, has no present intention of curtailing his visit to America.

Meanwhile, the two most promising prospects for the head of the government, Earl Curzon and Stanley Baldwin, Chancellor of the Exchequer, were in the country on a holiday and planning to remain away until Wednesday.

She has, he said, requested the resignation of the trustees, but they refused.

FLORIDA CONVICT CAMPS FILL CASH DRAWERS OF BIG BUSINESS

LOBBYISTS PROTECT SYSTEM

Naval Stores and Lumber Industries Indicted by Jury of Public Opinion

(The following is the first of a series of articles based on evidence and other data gathered in Florida, showing what corporations and individuals have benefited financially by the convict camp labor system.)

By COLE E. MORGAN, Universal Service, Tallahassee, Fla., May 21.—The naval stores and lumber industries of Florida stand indicted by the jury of public opinion as responsible for conditions prevailing in the convict lease camps of this State.

Greed for the dollar of rich corporations and individuals associated with them in these industries has placed a blot on the good name of Florida that it will take time to erase. The trail leads from their cash drawers and paybooks.

DEATH METED OUT. The whole country knows what has gone on in some of these lease camps through the startling and shocking revelations of the past three months since the North Dakota legislature brought to the attention of the governor and legislature of Florida the horrible death noted on Martin Tabert, a youth from that state. But the country will never know of all the fatalities that have been practiced in these camps on hundreds of convicts.

Florida has had the convict lease system for approximately a quarter of a century. Until four years ago the state leased out its lease prisoners, while counties did likewise with those convicted of misdemeanors. The state in 1919 abolished the leasing of felony prisoners and turned them over to the State Board of Prisoners to build highways, but the legislature failed to make adequate provisions for the maintenance and many counties in the State continued to sell them for hard labor. The highest bidder. Other counties, however, followed the lead of the State and put them on the roads to convict camps.

FREE LABOR SCARCITY. Free labor at low wages is scarce and hard to get in many sections of Florida, particularly in the lumber and turpentine industries. The work is hard and the working conditions are far from inviting. The operators in the main are of foreign land, and of isolated and unimproved districts that are practically foreign countries. So the laborers who work week long or wait days in water, sleep of these lands and the camps are in regions reeking with malaria and other forms of disease peculiar to the swamps.

It is no wonder, therefore, that the free labor that can come and go at will is not keen to follow these roads when they can get all the work they want on the roads. It works and other lines of industry.

CONVICTS IN DEMAND. But the convict can be made to go where his masters send him and can be forced to work. It is not in the least and under conditions to which he cannot protest. No convict labor has been in great demand. It is cheap labor, easy to get and easy to keep as long as the money runs. It comes in a more or less regular and steady stream that relieves the employers of the responsibility of constantly recruiting new men.

Nineteen of the sixty-four counties of Florida still have convict lease contracts in force, almost a third of the state. Every one of these contracts is either with a lumber concern or a naval stores operator. Some of them are engaged in both. The two industries are closely drawing on the same source of raw material, the Florida pine forests that they are virtually one.

CORPORATIONS PROFIT. The concerns that profit from this convict labor most lavishly are the corporations capitalized in the millions. The lease contracts are not all made directly with these corporations, yet they are the ones that get the most from them in the end. Some of the lessees are individual operators who dispose of their profits and are financed by the big corporations. Officials, directors and shareholders in these corporations have large holdings in banks, mercantile concerns, land companies, industries, etc., so that their profits from convict labor find their way into and exert a harmful influence on most every line of corporate business.

It is the power of this influence that has kept the lease system afloat into Florida so long and so doubt would have continued it longer but for the universal prejudgment

Bryan Wants Pledge Taken by Harding and Cabinet

Kansas City, Mo., May 21.—William Jennings Bryan is on the warpath again. He wants President Harding to take the pledge along with all government officials, big and small.

Speaking at the annual convention of the Southern Baptists in the state capital, where he was the guest of honor, Mr. Bryan urged that a pledge of total abstinence be taken by the President of the United States, his cabinet members, Congress and other government officials. Even college professors and preachers were included.

By the Martin Tabert case, "that influence reached directly into the Legislature halls of the State capital, where one cowardly, state Senator T. J. Kniskern, a district in the Senate and others who are interested in the turpentine and lumber industries, hold membership. They have their lobbyists on hand at every legislative session to look out for their interests."

They carry their influence into the country courthouses, where they have their members. This was strikingly brought to light in the exposure that led to the removal of Judge Willis and Sheriff Jones in this Leon County, because of their part in releasing Martin Tabert to a convict camp and to his death. But at least the good people of Florida have spoken and the iniquitous convict lease system is now ending its final days.

GEN. GOURAUD EAGER FOR JULY VISIT HERE

Paris, May 21.—"I want to see the place where your wonderful soldiers were bred," said General Gouraud in announcing his acceptance of the invitation of the 4th Division to attend its annual reunion in Indianapolis in July. General Gouraud was the hero of the battle of Chateau Thierry. He had charge of the French army during the day of 1918 fighting and was the commanding officer of the 4th Division, as well as a number of other American units. It was during this time of trial, he said, that he developed his war system for the American officers and men, who participated in the American doughboy.

The government announced that this invitation will open next month. Augustin Le Goret, director of the National Bank of Mexico, who participated in the Paris conference, is expected to return to the city soon to complete the transfer of the funds and to arrange for the opening of the bank.

SOVIET CANNOT YIELD, BRITISH ARE TOLD

Moscow, May 21 (A. P.).—Lennin Krasin, Russian Soviet representative in London, is unofficially understood to have been instructed to inform the British Foreign Office that Russia cannot yield in principle from its recent note replying to the British ultimatum.

While willing to make some temporary arrangement regarding the fishing rights of the British trawlers off the Murmansk coast, such as limiting the territorial zone, Krasin insisted the difference between the two countries can only be adjusted by a conference, particularly on the Eastern question. It is pointed out that England despite numerous requests, has never since 1920 stated exactly what the British policy and interests in Persia and other Eastern lands actually are.

Only a conference could reveal this, it is contended, and mutual concessions at such a conference might reconcile the differences.

If Lord Curzon, British Foreign Secretary, again declines a conference, the understanding is Russia feels there is nothing for Krasin to do but follow the advice of the Russian trade delegation in London.

BANDITS FIRED ON BY CHINESE TROOPS

Peking, May 21 (By A. P.).—Reports that troops were firing on the shantung bandits were received today by the Diplomatic Corps, which immediately drafted a new note to the Foreign Office, asking the Chinese government how it reconciled its promises to procure the release of the foreign captives and the events transpiring since that assurance.

As Parliament has not acted on ratification of the presidential appointment of Dr. Wellington Koo as Foreign Minister, the Foreign Office still is officially without a head.

The Diplomatic Corps heard the report of Marcel O. Berube, a Frenchman of Shanghai, whom the bandits released so that he could present their ultimatum to the government.

Captives Hope Only for Intervention. Shanghai, May 21.—Dr. R. Martens, a physician, returning from a relief mission to the shantung provinces, where fourteen prisoners are held by bandits, reported today that the consensus among the captives was foreign intervention was the only possible means of effecting their release.

The bandits, said Dr. Martens, utterly discredited and distrust Chinese officials and are eager to deal with foreigners.

THE MAN By GEORGE AGNEW CLARKE

Thrilling Story of Man and Girl Who Are Utter Strangers Living Together in African Jungle

A weird figure distinguished in dress from his companions only by the ebony-black ring of polished wax that he wore like a halo of darkness on his close-cropped and grizzled head. This was the liturgy got under way by the chief with a single word and carried on to its logical end by all the others in the gathering under the acacia tree:

"M'ungo!"

"Huh!" grunted thirty throats.

"The M'ungo arrives."

"Huh!"

"The M'ungo has come, his ship has landed from the sea."

"Huh!"

"It has rushed across the crail."

"Huh!"

"Two huts held out their arms and stopped it."

"Huh!"

"The medicine of the M'ungo is powerful."

"Huh! Huh!"

"Never before has the ship descended within the crail."

"Never before has it brought with it a white female."

"Huh!"

"The M'ungo's hair is straight like a dog's but the hair of the white female is like a river that winds beneath the sun."

"It was at this point that Andrew's companion stepped suddenly to his rapid stride. For the first time it occurred to him that perhaps he was listening. The clan continued.

"Her eyes are like the midday sky."

"Her cheeks are like flowers; they have the likeness of much pain."

"Huh!"

"She has no figure."

"She is all clothes."

"Huh!"

"Expensive to keep."

"The ship has landed in the crail but she has no legs."

as rapid as that of a serpent's. It was ghastly to watch, incredible in the rapidity of undulation, but once heard, unforgettable. It lasted much longer than Andrew could have held her breath, let alone used it, and ceased as suddenly as it had begun.

"All very interesting," said Andrew turning to her companion, "but why didn't they do it before?"

He looked at her absently. "There's a ceremonial," he said, "a dignity, about the African that is absurd till you've known it for years."

"For years?" repeated Andrew. "Is this your home?"

He shook his head. "No, Africa—this sort of thing—is never home to a white man. It's a place where he goes to forget his sins. I've been using it—whenever life has given me a chance—as a sun-bath for the soul."

Andrew stared at him, a puzzled frown on his brow. She wondered why his very presence did not hold her to a constant awe, wondered if it would ever fall to her lot to hear him say a senseless thing or laugh aloud. While she still wondered, he turned from her and began calling out meaningless words. "Gilling! Fiv! Tin! Hat! Bahit! Over-coat!"

At each name, for names they were, a native stepped forward. They were all bright-faced young men, fourteen or fifteen years of age, and their garb, made up of a green cloth bound tightly around their hips and falling to the knees and a red fez with tassels intact, marked them as housewives—kind of pickaninies who alone had the right to enter the white man's quarters and were collectively his recognized mouthpieces in conveying orders.

"Bahit!" repeated the white man.

From Ear to Ear

A younger quickly saluted and stepped out of the line, grinning from ear to ear at being distinguished even for a moment above the crowd.

With a jerk of his head toward Andrew, the white man began to talk rapidly. Bahit's eyes rolled from his face to Andrew's and back again. They widened, they narrowed and, each of the three times the white man said "Bahit" with a peculiar emphasis, they seemed to flash.

Andrew interrupted. "What does 'Bahit' mean, please?"

"It means a whip of raw rhino hide," said the man. "An impish child draws him with a whipper."

Andrew went white; her eyes flashed. "You mean you whip your slaves?" she said with curled lips. "At have whipped a boy once."

Andrew's face went red. "I have never whipped a slave," he said. "I have only whipped a boy once."

alone used it, and ceased as suddenly as it had begun.

"All very interesting," said Andrew turning to her companion, "but why didn't they do it before?"

THE POPPY PERIL

A ROMANCE OF HOLLYWOOD.

By Lauchlin James

WITH Kerry Rowan's list of names to work by, Scott Chase entered sublimely tonight and reaped a harvest of tonnage that sent Pyrites, Chandler, Big Berry, Le Cow and a dozen others flying to jail for terms of imprisonment which the presiding judge publicly regretted could not be made longer than this year.

In each case the convicted felon was warned the expiration of his sentence would be wise to conduct all his future activities elsewhere.

Just as the excitement attending the day of Rowan's sentence was at its height, the secret of Sylvia's illness had been religiously kept.

Matthew Crane walked in on her unexpectedly as she was talking to Pitch in the latter's office. She had been so relieved his mind was writing to him, but she had been so indefinite as to her condition and so unresponsive concerning her illness that the young man still clung under the feeling that he was being held unaccountably at arm's length.

At sight of her in the chair, beside Pitch's desk—clear-eyed, pink-cheeked and smiling—Crane's face flushed, then stiffened.

"I tell you, my dear," he murmured, "and would have withdrawn from the office if Sylvia had not called to him."

"I'm just leaving, Matt," said she, "and the sweet, natural voice of old. 'Won't you ride home with me?'"

"Why, certainly, if you wish it," he glanced at Peter Finn as if to get a second opinion.

"Sure, go along," advised the

WHO SAID IT AND WHERE

general manager. "That other matter can wait. You should have a good deal to talk about, you two."

It was a natural supposition, but for all the two said to each other, it was not the least bit true. Matt was a whole mistaken one. Sylvia was a whole mistaken one. Matt was silent because he felt he had an explanation coming to him; Sylvia was silent because her heart was filled with conflicting emotions—happiness at being back again, freed from the clutches of the monster which had threatened to devour her; sorrow at the loss of the friend who had made that happiness possible.

It was not until they were seated alone in Sylvia's dressing room that Matt asked, at last: "Sylvia, why did Kerry refuse to tell me where you were?"

"Because he dared not," replied Sylvia, smiling. "Wad a munster, dear, there is something I have to tell you. He was in love with me, you know that and when he saw it was of no use hoping that some day I might love him in return he made up his mind to give me the happiness I'd want."

"He saved me from myself," Matt—saved me from you. He was afraid that if you found out the truth about what had happened to me you would hate me. He was afraid, and so he is kind to you in the end, dear, he had to be cruel for a while. Now it's all over and I'm depending on your love to make you understand."

Kerry, listening with tears, voice trembling with the intensity of desire to tell this right to his heart, went bravely ahead and told her story; revealing to her for the first time how the curse had fallen upon her, how she had fought her hopeless fight against it, and how Rowan, in his wisdom, had finally taken the heroic steps necessary to rescue her from certain destruction.

"I don't understand it at first, myself," she told him, "I rebelled and fought against them, all for days. It was not until Kerry was dead that Mr. Pitch came up there and told me why I had been kidnapped and why Kerry didn't want you to know anything about it. We may live a long time, Matt, dear, but we'll never find another such wonderful friend as Sylvia Rowan. You believe me, don't you, Matt—and do you understand?"

There were as many as the birds and the bees, when all once we heard a cough muffled

To be charming and attractive your hair must be beautiful. Beautiful hair is not a matter of luck, it is simply a matter of care.

You can have beautiful hair if you shampoo it properly. Proper shampooing is what brings out all the real life and lustre, the natural wave and color, and makes it soft, fresh and lustrous.

Your hair simply needs frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, but it cannot have the harsh effect of ordinary soap. The alkali in ordinary soap dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it. This is why millions of women, every where, use Mulsified Coconut Oil Shampoo. The clean, pure, and non-greasy product cannot possibly injure, and does not dry the scalp or make the hair brittle, but rather

STILL MAN'S EX-WIFE AND FOLLEDS NOW REPORTED ALLIES

FOES UNITED IN INTEREST IN WIDOW

New York, May 21.—Under the healing influence of time certain rough edges in the Stillman divorce case are being worn away, it was indicated today.

In fact, in any further court action in the way of settlement of the famous case started when James A. Stillman, banker, attempted to divorce Anne T. Stillman, it is said that Mrs. Stillman and Folle, whom she named in her affirmative defense, may become allies.

At the same time it is said that Stillman, apparently having definitely broken with Folle, is manifesting interest in the widow.

Anne T. Stillman

The fact that Mrs. Stillman is manifesting interest in the widow of one of her old business associates, Mrs. Joseph T. Talbot, during his lifetime, Mr. Talbot was a warm personal and business friend of Stillman.

Mrs. Talbot at present is in Paris. Stillman's whereabouts are unknown but he is supposed to be in the vicinity of New York.

Now in Paris. Stillman's friends declare, however, that his interest in Mrs. Talbot is confined solely to a friendship developed through his efforts to revive and guide her in business matters.

Mrs. Stillman has asserted sympathy for Miss Leeds for the first time and is understood to have expressed a desire, if necessary, to take Miss Leeds into her care to see that the boy is given the opportunity that she feels he deserves.

North Shore Cobnys Growing Fast, Betty Ilden Reports

Betty Ilden

By BETTY ILDEN
THE Dryden Cobnys are expected to arrive this week at "Albion," their Beverly place. Which must be welcome news, indeed, to the North Shore colonists, for the Albion are leaders among their smart crowd.

No. 253 Beacon street, the Iowa residence of the Albans, has seen little enough of its master and mistress within the past few years, for the latter are of the ever-increasing contingent which spends so much of its time abroad. The Albans are especially devoted to France, from which country they returned last week on board the Olympic, staying a short while in New York before coming to Boston. The former June Fairbank and her husband were about two seasons ago, not returning to these shores even for the Summer months.

A PROPOS of the North Shore—that exclusive strip of coastline will feel a keen loss this season, for I understand that lively Alisa Mellon and her father, Andrew Mellon, are not to be of the color there this summer. A year ago, at the Keith Merril place, known as "Avalon," at Prides Crossing, where they have numerous lovely parties for the young set during their sojourn. The Winter home of the Mellons is in Washington, of course, and the accompanying picture shows Miss Mellon as she was snapped the other day at the capital's Horse Show.

I SUPPOSE that not a few of Boston's famed "four hundred" will go over to Coshburn, the wedding of pretty Catharine Vanderbilt and Harry C. Cushing Jr., the all-important event scheduled for June 28. The Cushing have numerous connections here.

The little-to-be granddaughters, Mr. Frederic Nelson, mother of Mrs. Hollis Hunsweil of Boston, and a frequent visitor here, is at present entertaining at Hot Springs and was among the box-holders at the opening of the baseball season there. Mrs. Nelson will return to her apartment at the Plaza in New York, in time for the wedding. Later on she plans to sail for Europe.

WROTE SONG OF LOVE AND LOST HIS WIFE

Hamhamton, N. Y., May 21.—While Mrs. Helen Jeannette Rundell, leader of the younger set, trusted her husband, Leon Rundell, poet, song writer and man about town, with her will to wait, he wrote passionately of "other women." The young matron has been granted a decree of divorce.

"Say Yes to Me" is his best known song hit. One that has been sung up and down the country, and Mrs. Rundell thought Rundell had her mind when he penned the amorous lines. Now, she says, she knows much better.

His next best-known hit is "Miss Me at the Movies, Dear," and Mrs. Rundell believes that this also was meant to be an invitation to her, she says.

Here's part of the song which Mrs. Rundell stated were written for her, and which now she finds expressed only a flicker there. They are from "Say Yes to Me":

"I am feeling lonely.
Yes, I'm feeling sad.
In all the world there's just one girl
Who can make me glad.
The whole world loves a lover,
If he love is true—
And I'm in love with someone,
And that someone is you."

"I hope to win this game I'm in—
It's the game that we call love.
Let's play the game together—
Can't win alone.
I love you, dear, forever,
And I want you for my own."

'HUGGER' GRABS TWO WOMEN OF SOMERVILLE

A "Jack the Hugger" is at large in the western section of Somerville and the police of that city are bending every effort to locate him.

Within a half hour two young women were attacked by a man, but in each instance he made his escape after being chased.

He is described as being 5 feet 4 inches in height and wears a soft hat, dark suit and gaudy coat.

The "hugger" grabbed a young lady on her way home near the City Lodge on Holland street, but was frightened away by A. L. Merrifield, No. 1 Victoria street and L. R. Hanson, No. 192 Willow avenue, who chased him for some distance.

Twenty minutes later another young lady was grabbed in the rear of No. 63 Simpson avenue, but the man was again frightened away.

Patrolmen Flay and Rosayne, after searching through the yards and streets in the vicinity, were unable to locate either the young lady or the man.

DR. ZIEGFELD DIES IN CHICAGO HOME

Chicago, May 21.—Dr. Florence Ziegfeld, eight-two years old, noted musician and founder of the Chicago Musical College, died at his home here of pneumonia. Dr. Ziegfeld and his wife celebrated their fifty eighth wedding anniversary a week ago. He was born in Germany and father of "The Follies."

He is described as being 5 feet 4 inches in height and wears a soft hat, dark suit and gaudy coat.

The "hugger" grabbed a young lady on her way home near the City Lodge on Holland street, but was frightened away by A. L. Merrifield, No. 1 Victoria street and L. R. Hanson, No. 192 Willow avenue, who chased him for some distance.

Twenty minutes later another young lady was grabbed in the rear of No. 63 Simpson avenue, but the man was again frightened away.

Patrolmen Flay and Rosayne, after searching through the yards and streets in the vicinity, were unable to locate either the young lady or the man.

MRS. MARY A. KENNEDY OF WINTHROP DEAD

She underwent an operation three or four weeks ago and failed to recover. She is survived by her husband; one son, Joseph P. Kennedy, and two daughters, Miss Loretta and Miss Margaret.

Captain James P. Hickey of the East Boston police station, Dr. John A. Hickey, East Boston physician, and Charles M. Hickey, former mayor of Brockton, are brothers. The funeral will be held Wednesday morning.

Will Make Taff Design, Says E. V. Debs
New York, May 21.—Bittering the Socialist Party's expressed purpose to demand the resignation of the Chief Justice, Debs' impeachment because of his acceptance of a $10,000 annuity left him by the late Andrew Carnegie, Eugene V. Debs, freed from Atlanta Federal Penitentiary Christmas 1921 by President Harding's grant of amnesty to special political prisoners, made his first visit to New York since his release.

ASSAULT OF WOMAN IS MOBBED Auto Clubs Fight For Tax Referendum

SCHEMERS TO BLOCK VOTE PROTESTED

Popular Ballot on Measure Is Demanded in Interests of "Fair Play"

The organized automobile associations of Massachusetts, led to number over 100,000 members, appealed to the Legislature today to defeat the measure designed to prevent a public vote on the gasoline tax bill of two cents a gallon.

A letter of protest against the legislative scheme was received by every legislator from the Boston Automobile Dealers' Association, the Massachusetts State Automobile Association and the Boston Commercial Motor Vehicle Association.

UNSEEN IN PROTEST.
The protest was directed against the action of the Senate which, in passing the tax, attached an amendment appropriating $1,000 for the expense of collecting the tax.

That amendment conflicts with a constitutional provision which says the people may not stipend the legislature for the expense of collecting the tax.

The amendment is an attempt to block the right of the people to a referendum, said the auto organizations.

DEMAND FAIR PLAY.
"Are the people you represent being treated fairly by not being allowed to voice their opinion, which the referendum law allows? Will you let them be checkmated in such a manner?"

Senator Walter E. McLane of Fall River issued a statement, saying his purpose in offering the amendment was not to prevent the people from voting on the tax, but to demand the amendment would undoubtedly have that effect.

Fitchburg Suicide Victim

MISS BEATRICE HOLLOWAY

Fitchburg, May 21.—"Harold, dear, here is a dime. Will you sleep in the other room tonight? I am very tired and I want to be alone."

Beatrice Holloway, eighteen, of No. 18 West street, this city, thus killed her brother, Harold, eight years old, who had been accustomed to sleeping with her. A few minutes later Beatrice was dead, a suicide by gas poisoning.

HAD LOST POSITION.
Loss of her position in the dry goods store of Nichols & Frost in Chelsea, playing between here and Woodworth and members of the firm's family as the reason for her act. After three years' service at her father's home, she had been discharged, as she had lost this position from them when she returned home. She appeared light-hearted as she bade other members of the family "good night," and then she persuaded Harold to sleep alone.

FOUND BY FATHER.
In that position she was found by her father, Walter H. Holloway, a member of the fire department. It was not until later that the family knew of her being discharged, as she had kept this information from them when she returned home. She appeared light-hearted as she bade other members of the family "good night," and then she persuaded Harold to sleep alone.

ANGRY MOB THREATENS NEGRO

Police Rescue Man Chased
From Scollay Square Tunnel
Station by Crowd

Mrs. Mary A. Russell, thirty-three years old, of East Boston, was knocked down and beaten by a negro whose advances she repulsed, at the street landing of the East Boston tunnel at Scollay square.

The negro, identified as Gabriel E. Jones, of Garden street, West End, was chased through several downtown streets by enraged sailors and civilians.

RESCUED BY POLICE.
The pursuers captured Jones on State street, between Washington street and Atlantic avenue, and were mobbing him when Sergeant Flynn and Patrolman Conner, with drawn revolvers, took him away from the crowd and placed him under arrest.

Miss Josephine Horner

Mrs. Russell was treated at the City Hall avenue police station by Dr. William A. Dunn for injuries to her head and ankles. She identified Jones as the man who attacked her. He was held on a charge of criminal assault.

ANOTHER ESCAPE.
Miss Josephine Horner, daughter of a neighbor of Mrs. Russell, escaped from the grasp of Jones. It was her shriek, with those of Mrs. Russell, that attracted the attention of the sailors and the civilians.

For the past month police have received complaints from several women that they have been assaulted by a negro in and about the entrance to the East Boston tunnel at Scollay square.

Mrs. Russell lives at No. 232 Chelsea street, East Boston. Miss Horner, who is fifteen years old, lives at No. 237 Huntington street, East Boston.

Cover Tilts, and They Plunge to Death Near Drummondville, Que.

Drummondville, Que., May 21.—Five children of St. Nicéphore, a small parish three miles from here, were drowned in a well when a cover on which they were standing, tilted and plunged them into the water.

The fatality occurred a short distance from the home of Thomas Hude, their father.

FATHER WILL FIGHT TO RETAIN HOME

Clara Elizabeth, two months old, daughter of Thomas G. Diehl, and the house at No. 73 Central avenue, Somerville, from which the family was offered to move because of the landlord's antipathy against children among tenants. At bottom left, a hencock and fowls that are permitted at the other side of the house. The child's father will fight the removal edict.

Somerville Mayor Probes Landlady's Order for Removal of Family With Infant Girl

All Somerville waits for the developments in the most peculiar phase of birth control on record in that fair city.

The case in point is that in which Mrs. Mary V. Puley of Moulton street, Somerville, a leader in which Diehl today issued a statement in which she said Mrs. Puley was to move out because the Diehl family had recently increased by one—Clara Elizabeth, who is now two months old.

Fortified by assurance of support and sympathy from Mayor John M. Waver and Lieutenant Michael Kennedy, former head of the Housing Commission of Somerville, Mrs. Puley today issued a statement in which she said Mrs. Puley was to move out because the Diehl family had recently increased by one—Clara Elizabeth, who is now two months old.

OBJECTS TO DICTATION.
"I may or may not believe in birth control," said Mrs. Puley. "I may or may not intend to practice it." But I certainly will not permit Mrs. Puley or anybody else to dictate how, when or how often I may have children.

5 CHILDREN DROWNED IN WELL

Cover Tilts, and They Plunge to Death Near Drummondville, Que.

Drummondville, Que., May 21.—Five children of St. Nicéphore, a small parish three miles from here, were drowned in a well when a cover on which they were standing, tilted and plunged them into the water.

The fatality occurred a short distance from the home of Thomas Hude, their father.

The children ranged in age from two to six years.

One other, one year old, escaped, because he was not large enough to clamber up on the cover.

He was about to take the children for an automobile ride. He called to them, and receiving no answer, went to the well and saw the five bodies floating in the water.

SMOKER SLEEPS AND BURNS TO DEATH

One man was burned to death, three persons narrowly escaped injury, and a fireman suffered minor burns in a lodging house blaze at No. 466 Shawmut avenue, South End.

Henry A. McMahon, sixty-two years old, a stationary engineer in the traction division of the Public Works Department, occupant of a top-floor room, was found dead by firemen after the fire had been extinguished.

It is believed the fire started from a tipped cage or pipe, which fell from McMahon's mouth when he slept.

They caused damage to the property which was expensive to repair. For that reason I wanted to put the house to be occupied by himself, his mother, brother and sister—all adults.

"He got the house under false pretenses, and now he's making a big fool of himself and myself."

HOW THE STORY STARTS:

ANDREA PELLOR, the daughter of an impoverished British baron, is engaged to a millionaire diamond merchant whom she does not love. Stealing away from the Indian Ocean Hotel she sees a flying machine on the beach, being gotten ready to ascend by two men, a white and a giant black. Upon the spur of the moment she cries, "Take me with you!" He straps her in and they are away. He says he is not going back. The engine goes down and they land in the jungle.

CHAPTER III

ANDREA gazed at him, her lips parted in wonder. At last he felt her eyes upon him and a deep flush mounted from his neck and swept upward, lighting the tan of his face with a subdued glow.

"If that happened to me," thought Andrea, "I'd be as red as a field of poppies."

"I beg your pardon, stammered the man and started walking up and down with quick strides. Andrea knew instinctively that he was warning up muscles that had been suddenly frozen, studying shaking knees and shaky heart."

She turned her eyes from him and gazed around to get her first glimpse of the real Africa. From the very start it left her puzzled. She stood at the far side of a great circular court, board hard and swept clean as a floor. Within its bounds were two acacia trees, thickly fronded, with spreading. Around the court, thirty high-peaked huts stood like sentinels. Behind the huts, other but far smaller, structures swarmed—chicken houses, strongly walled, granaries on four stilts, pigeon coots, a stockaded cattle kraal and a smaller goat fold.

But what puzzled her with the Africans themselves. A flying machine had dropped in their midst and discharged two fair, yet not exceptional, specimens of a white and dominant race, yet the blacks continued their various occupations and disquisitions apparently unperturbed. There were three women pounding millet in ponderous wooden mortars. They continued to pound. There were other women doing various things—breaking up firewood, sweeping out huts with bunches of brooms, cooking, nursing babies, languidly watching naked children at play. Whatever their occupation, they made no sudden move of variation; even their tongues kept still.

In the shade of one of the vast acacia trees was a veritable concourse of men. Their black bodies, clothed only in cloths of game pelts or dirty loin-cloths, like a blot of ink against the surrounding glare. They sat for the most part on their heels, smoking white, slow-burning cheroots. Two only could be said to be working. They were very old and sat with their backs against the trunk of the tree, their legs stretched straight out before them and at their sides neat bundles of striped palm leaves. They were weaving baskets. The men, at least, were not tongue-tied. They seemed to be going through some oral ceremony. First one and then another would take the cheroot from his lips and make a single remark; then the rest would all grunt in unison and with a deep-chested expelling of all the breath in their bodies that gave almost the effect of an explosion.

It annoyed Andrea that her companion seemed to share the stolid calm of the natives in what, to her mind, ought to have been an occasion of much excitement and chatter. It never occurred to her that he was unmoved because he could understand what the men were saying and was merely bored. At the moment the wheels of the flying machine had struck the ground the apparently interminable and, to Andrea, meaningless, chant had been left by the native chief.

THERE'S MONEY AND LUCK IN YOUR NAME — LOOK

As They Do
in Utopia

By Les Conklin

"WHAT makes you look so tired this morning, Tilly?" inquired Silas Squeenspeny, the macaroni magnate, as his stenographer staggered into the office.

"Oh, I had to walk home from an automobile ride," explained Tilly wearily.

"Did the party get too rough for you?" asked the magnate.

"Oh, no," replied Tilly; "it was the road. It was so full of holes that we punctured all the tires and had to walk fifteen miles to a garage."

"That's too bad," said Mr. Squeenspeny. "Perhaps you had better rest up a bit. Now suppose you go home and I'll have one of the other girls do your work until you feel well again."

"No, I couldn't do that, Mr. Squeenspeny," protested Tilly. "They have enough work to do already, and besides I don't want anybody messing up the files. You go right ahead with the dictation."

"If you insist, I will, but only until ten o'clock," said the magnate. "Then we'll go down to the yacht club and enjoy a sail around the bay in my new cruiser. I'm sure the ocean breeze will liven you up immensely."

"What is the trouble, my man," said the Hon. Percival de Peyster as he strolled over a man in uniform in the gutter, "did an automobile run over you?"

"It felt more like a steam roller," replied Roaring Jack, the prize of the good ship Nancy Jane. "You see I just got back from a cruise to China and felt like dancing. I tried to break into a jig over at Tony's place, but some boiler-maker over there got in an argument with me and threw me out."

"That's an outrage," exclaimed the Hon. de Peyster. "I shall call the police at once."

"Don't do that," protested Roaring Jack hastily. "I don't want to be too hard on 'em. I'm sure that they will apologize when they have calmed down."

"But it is a shame that you can't dance when you want to," said Mr. de Peyster. "I'll tell you what we'll do. My daughter is throwing a big party at the house tonight and she might need an extra guest, so if you don't mind wearing my dress suit, come along and we'll go."

"This man is charged with pushing a girl into the canal, your Honor," said the clerk as young Cutler Earl was brought before the court. "If she hadn't been fast enough to find she would have drowned."

"Have you anything to say for yourself?" queried the judge.

"Yes, sir," replied Cutler with some nasal. "Last week I let her wear my diamond ring and today she said she had lost it. She gave me the pawn ticket and said 'I wanted it I would have to get it out.'"

"I don't blame you a bit," sympathized the judge. "But this should have strangled her while you were about it. Next?"

Today's Winners:

A Grammatical Love.
You see a pretty girl walking down the street. She has dainty clothes and you consider her altogether FEMININE. If she is SCANDALOUS you become NOMINATIVE at once. You walk across the street, changing to the VERBAL SUBJECT and soon you become IMPERATIVE. If she is not OBJECTIVE in this CASE you become PICTURAL. You walk home together. Her family is PRESIDENT. Her mother is ACTIVATIVE, her father is IMPERATIVE and takes her to the movies and makes things TENSE. The little brother is an INDEFINITE ARTICLE. You talk of the FUTURE and things are in a happy MOOD for a while, but she always chooses the SUBJECT for the PRESENT. When you kiss her she favors the MARCINGING. The ACTIVE case is over at last and you become POSSESSIVE.

Tonight—Let's go swimming at the beach next Sunday, dearie.

FIRST AIDS

If one of your high-bait friends invites you to go horseback riding and you have had no previous experience in the sport, you will naturally want to take a few workouts in private before making your debut. It is not necessary to hire a horse to do this.

A few rides on the merry-go-round will teach you how to sit on a horse correctly and will also acquaint you with the beast's habits.

It may also help you to read about famous horsemen of history. Memorize all statistics of "The Charge of the Light Brigade" and carefully read "The Ride from Ghent to Aix," "The Midnight Ride of Paul Revere," and "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse."

Another good plan is to practice dismounting so that you can get off the horse quickly if it starts to run away. You can do this by booking a fast freight and jumping off at stated intervals.

As a final preparation for the ride, travel a few blocks in a crowded street car, clutching the strap with your teeth and wincing your legs around one of the seats. When you can hold this position without faintly inuring the other passengers, your training course will be finished.

HELP THOSE WHO DESERVE TO GET STARTED RIGHT.

In your place, of employment is there not some person who appears to make every effort to do the work assigned, but is unable to accomplish what is expected?

Would it not be a real good Samaritan act for you to give a little advice to such a person? Perhaps a little help, in order to assist in getting the desired accomplishment or requirements.

Although he or she is a stranger, someone in whom you feel you are not called upon to display an interest, if an honest effort is being made to meet demands of the institution, is it not up to you to assist such a person anyway?

Some pick up new work quickly and start in the right way. It is slow in adapting themselves to new conditions are often strong on production once they have learned what is expected.

Some persons deserve help to get started in the right way. If the new person should be discharged, it might be a serious matter for him.

A little help from you, a few suggestions, perhaps, and you may have prevented a calamity in the life of another.

A returned traveler said he felt right at home in Europe. Little did he know that the hotel proprietors over there have learned how to cheer him up from the day he ever left.

Since we don't do it here, the hotel is a very different place. They are going to put him with the others who are over there.

TEX O'ROURKE SEARCHING ENGLAND FOR HEAVYWEIGHT

DIE-HARD TO UNDEARTH STOP BIG BATTLER

By DAMON RIVINSON.
Tex O'Rourke, well-known boxing man, is in England trying to find a heavyweight champion.

This is one of the oldest and strangest of quests. Richard K. Fox tried it many years ago when he ran the Police Gazette and was mad at John L. Sullivan. Hundreds of men searched the country, seeking likely looking big white boys, when John Arthur Johnson was champion.

The odds against O'Rourke being successful are whatever the population of England may be to one. A very long shot—millions to one. But O'Rourke is looking for one man out of millions. It is difficult to understand why England, cradle of the prize ring, of the heavyweight title, has been unable to produce a big fighter of any ability in generations, while turning out many little men of great pugilistic class.

Any one of two second-rate American heavyweights that might be named could whip the best of the English heavies now in the ring.

It cannot be that the physical raw material is not there. England has centuries of magnificent specimens of young manhood. The courage of the Englishman is unquestioned.

Why, then, has no Englishman since Charles Mitchell day—that day many years ago—come forward as a real title contender?

Perhaps Tex O'Rourke will solve the mystery. The answer may be that the English have the fast, clever style of boxing, which is best exemplified by little fellows.

Then they do not encourage the big, rugged, slugger type of fighter from which good heavyweights are produced. The most popular heavyweight England has had since the days of Mitchell, who was really a middleweight, was Tom Braddock Wells, an illustration of the type they like.

Wells at his best was very fast, a fine boxer, a fair puncher. Unfortunately he could not take a punch. He had a pasteurized chin.

Over here Wells for all his style, could not have been popular because of his fragility.

Over there, Jim Jeffries and Jack Dempsey, with their enormous fists, as beginners, would probably not have won. They would have been quickly discarded because they could not take a lick.

In England they go in for speed and boxing that takes away the punch. Perhaps that is why their heavyweights have been so poor of late years.

England's neighbor, France, produced Georges Carpentier, a light heavyweight, who was good enough to beat all the English heavies, simply because he could punch.

It is strange, with all their interest in boxing, the English have not seen that their style is wrong as far as the big men are concerned. If MIKE is wrong, because it gets them nowhere.

Nowadays the American boxing fan—the "ring" worm—demands the punching ability of the heavyweights. The modern "savant" would not care for the speed of his opponent. He wants the man-down style of fighting, which is produced quicker results.

Dempsey is responsible for this. Dempsey, twice his opponent over so easily, so quickly, the fan expects all boxers to do the same thing. All boxers are measured by Dempsey.

The first essential in a heavyweight is punching power, with ability to "take" a punch. A man stands punishment. Perhaps this last is first.

Trainer on track a man stand everything—boxing, speed, the knack of playing his punches. They cannot teach him how to stand punishment.

Dempsey was a great puncher when he started out. He had natural punching power. When he started to use his punches he became a knock-outer. He could always stand great punishment, as he demonstrated the night John Lester Johnson, a negro heavyweight, broke his ribs, yet failed to stop him.

Dempsey's speed alone came to him after he had been fighting some time—after he had learned how to fight. It never lessened his punch. Now Dempsey, making ready to meet Tom Gibson, is training for more speed, using the fastest sparring partners he can get.

Gibbons is a fine boxer, a real good fighter. He is of his best against slow big men. He seems to have a peculiar knack of punishing big men severely. He is in good against men his own size or smaller.

This is not difficult of explanation. Against a big man Gibson can slip in under his punches, can get close to his opponent. Gibson is a really body puncher against big men. He is a short, plucky fighter.

Harry Kirk, a man smaller than Gibson, beat Gibson by piling in on him from start to finish, crowding him. Jack Dempsey sat with the writer at the ringside and saw that fight. Perhaps Dempsey is taking a tip from Kirk in preparing to fight Gibson with speed.

Serious, but, for that purpose.

SPORTS AMERICAN BOSTON

Parker Will Tell All About the Big Intercollegiate

WHO will win the big intercollegiate at Franklin Field, Philadelphia this week?

Every follower of track and field sports is interested in this great annual track and field classic. The peaking of old stars; the appearance of new marvels; the prospect of intercollegiate and world's records; the attempt of the University of California to repeat its sensational triumphs of last year and the year before, and the close approach of the 1924 Paris Olympiad in which this week's performers will be Uncle Sam's chief reliance all have contributed in rousing this interest.

So today Charles E. Parker, the Boston American's college sports editor, and a recognized authority in that field, begins a series of articles which will culminate Thursday in his selections of the probable champions and place winners.

Last week Parker picked the team winners of the New England intercollegiate and the Harvard-Yale dual meet; correctly naming the individual winners in twenty of the events and forecasting fifty of those who scored second, third or fourth places.

If you want the best "dope," follow Parker's series and—Don't miss Thursday's forecast.

GREAT COLLEGE GAMES COME SATURDAY

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

The week of the big intercollegiate begins here.

On Friday and Saturday afternoon at Franklin Field, Philadelphia, upward of thirty Eastern college teams will seek to turn back the two-time victors.

Invaders from the University of California, in the first-seventh annual meet, will meet the representatives of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America.

The dual and sectional intercollegiate games which have been exciting Eastern track followers for the past five years, have served as preliminary steps to this greatest of all track and field engagements. Through them the athletes have been tried and tested and have gained the very essential training that comes only through competition, and their coaches plan but light workouts from now until the teams leave for Philadelphia.

That the Californians, whose sensational victories last year and the year before, gave Easterners a new belief in the possibility of a team having a study of conditions this season.

Jack Merchant, who scored 13 points, lost to Team.

For one thing California has lost.

Through graduation, the services of Jack Merchant, one of the greatest all-around athletes of recent years, who, in the 1922 meet, won the hammer throw with a new record mark, finished second in the shot put, third in the broad jump and third in the javelin throw, scoring thirteen points for his team.

Lesser games have been experienced in the graduation of Hendrix, who was third in the quarter mile and four, who was fourth in the two miles. And although new comers on the California squad should somewhat compensate for these losses, it is doubtful if they can fully do so.

Letland Stanford Team Will Not Be at Meet.

But a factor, fully as unfavorable to the Boston team, is the loss of Jack Merchant, comes in the absence of the Letland Stanford team in the entire of this year's engagement.

This rival Sunset State squad proved a most helpful asset to the University of California team both last year and the year before. In 1921 it was alleged that a Stanford sprinter, in the final event, allowed a Californian to precede him to the line so that the University of California could secure a sufficient total of points to beat Harvard for the championship by a fraction. And last year Stanford athletes kept Princeton from acquiring the title.

Valger challenged Dundee eight months ago, but the challenge had not been accepted until Valger protested against the Dundee-Berlin match on May 30.

Dallas Player Traded

Bobby Shaw, for nearly ten years one of the leading short fielders of the Texas League, and for the last three seasons member of the Dallas team, has been sold to Shreveport.

B. UNIVERSITY PATERSON ELEVEN FALL RIVER BEATS

Will play the postponed game with Boston University tomorrow afternoon at Tufts Oval. The teams were scheduled to play last Wednesday, but owing to bad weather the game was postponed.

Art Krug, son of the Jumbo pitching staff, will be on the mound for Tufts. He is in fine form and expects to chalk up his fifth victory for the Medford outfit.

Steve Toland, veteran on the B. U. pitching staff, pitched three seasons will serve the Tufts' batsmen.

Tufts to favorite but the Red and White expect to come through with a win. Last year the Jumbos had rompers handed B. U. nine a severe retraining and hope to repeat this year.

The Winner of the Straw Hat Derby

WHEN Harry S. Sinclair's Zev beat the best in the land last Saturday afternoon in America's famous Turt Classic, the Kentucky Derby, Truly Warner's "Ace of Spades" was leading the field in the race for the New England Straw Hat Sweepstakes.

Every man likes a winner whether it's a Horse or a Hat, and the "Ace of Spades" started a strong favorite and breezed home an easy winner. Every year we have to break our own record to make a new record for Boston and New England.

If you think the "Ace of Spades" has a little too much speed for your particular purpose don't forget that I have everything in a Straw Hat from the conventional straight brim, saw-tooth edge, white Sennet Sailor, to a double twisted, golden brown Chinese Fancy Sun-Tone Tuscan.

Expert Advice in Art World

The dispute between Sir Joseph Duveen and Mr. G. J. Motte over the authenticity of an object of art, and the suit against Sir Joseph Duveen by Mr. De Motte because he thought the object was not authentic, and Mr. Motte believed to be authentic, raises a question of vital importance to all purchasers of art objects.

Most purchasers of art objects and antiquities know a good deal about their particular line of collecting, but not by any means everything about it; and consequently all careful and discerning collectors secure the best possible expert advice in making their collections.

If expert advice may not be had, there is not the slightest question that the greater part of the purchasing of antiquities and art objects would promptly stop.

And surely expert advice cannot be had and will not be sought if experts are enjoined from expressing their real opinions.

Should experts be limited by law to merely expressing favorable opinions, the opinions would have no value. There is already too much restriction of that kind due to the professional courtesy that prevails among dealers, and many of the best experts are to be found among the great dealers.

To limit this freedom of opinion further by legal restriction would be to deprive expert opinion of all use or worth. And whenever expert opinion is deprived of freedom of expression and the buyers lose confidence in the value and the genuineness of expert opinion, there will be a falling off in purchases to a degree that is astounding and shock the gentlemen who deal in art and antiquities.

Sir Joseph Duveen is a great expert, recognized as such in art circles throughout the world—consulted by museums, and largely depended upon by many of the foremost private collectors of the world.

Mr. De Motte is also a noted expert, and it is no reflection upon the knowledge, ability or sincerity of either one that in some cases they fail to agree.

The most eminent lawyers, the most eminent doctors, the most eminent statesmen do not always agree, no matter how high the purposes that animate them.

Clubwomen Refuse to Back Harding Court Plan

Too Sensible to Endorse Scheme for Entangling United States in Europe's Troubles

COPYRIGHT, 1923, BY KING FEATURES

The Council of the National Federation of Women's Clubs, at Atlanta, was too sensible to be caught by the attempt to get them to endorse President Harding's scheme for entangling America into the World Court.

When a resolution was presented to them calling for a vote in approval of the World Court plan, they rejected it. Instead, they passed a resolution in favor of the principle of arbitration and international cooperation.

No American will withhold his acquiescence in the stand taken by the leaders of American women at Atlanta. America has taken the lead in the practical application of arbitration to the settlement of international disputes. America has done much, and will do more, to further the cause of international cooperation.

What we will not do, and what our women will not do, is to be dragged into the League of Nations through the backdoor of the World Court.

We will not participate in a court dominated by the representatives of nations which are hostile to us and embittered by our sloth and our prosperity.

We will not become a party to the making of decisions on world affairs which concern us not at all, but which, eventually, we shall be called upon to enforce.

The women voters of America ground when they changed the resolution approving the World Court into one approving the principle of international friendship, for the reason that they "hesitated to form entangling alliances when such conditions exist as are to be found in Europe today."

The Sorrows of Childhood

Adults Don't Realize It

COPYRIGHT, 1923, BY KING FEATURES

Pity the child misunderstood. Raymond Baker, ten years old, was brokenhearted when his mother eloped, leaving him and his father. At school, with the thoughtless cruelty of childhood, his comrades teased and taunted the unfortunate lad with jokes about his mother's desertion.

Unable to bear this teasing, the little boy stayed away from school secretly. For that his father punished him, believing, of course, that "it was for the boy's good."

In the evening he found the child lying on his bed with his father's short-barreled rifle beside him. He had escaped from his troubles by killing himself.

Grown people do not trouble to understand children, do not realize that they are infinitely more sensitive, because their brains, nerves and hearts have not become hardened by years.

It is a cruel world for many poor children. Their sorrows are deep and many, and maturity rarely understands them.

To Protect Panama

Flying Machines and Submarines—Not Big Guns

COPYRIGHT, 1923, BY KING FEATURES

Big guns from ships that we stupidly promised to scow at the Washington conference will be used on land to defend the Panama Canal in case of war. They would be of some use, but not much, in the kind of war that's coming.

Sixteen-inch guns are not efficient against fliers, and if the big canal is attacked, the attack will come from the air. Plenty of flying machines and submarines, with men trained to their use in the public service, will make this country safe. Big guns or big ships won't do it.
